Valuing Reconciliation in Global Markets: Unlocking Business Growth Through Indigenous Partnerships

Join us at the April 27-29, 2025 “Valuing Reconciliation in Global Markets” conference to discover how leading global businesses are achieving both commercial success and sustainability by embracing partnerships with Indigenous Peoples, communities and Nations, respecting their rights, and incorporating their principles and perspectives into their business practices.

Valuing the leadership of Indigenous nations and demonstrating respect for Indigenous rights in business contributes to successful global and domestic market access, supports long-term economic growth, and improves environmental sustainability. The integration of Indigenous principles in business is a strategic advantage that benefits Indigenous and commercial interests in highly competitive global markets.

Leading corporate and Indigenous speakers from Canada, the United States, and around the world will share actionable insights on how partnerships with Indigenous nations has brought:

- » Long-term business stability and revenue predictability
- » Improved access to investment capital
- » Enhanced regulatory compliance and risk mitigation
- » Better environmental stewardship
- » Community support and operational constancy

Conference delegates will gain insights from industry, government, and Indigenous-owned corporation experts, network with like-minded professionals, and learn strategies to effectively integrate Indigenous partnerships and perspectives into commercial operations.
